0:00:50 Ron: Hey everyone, this is Ron from Football is America, and we are inviting you to check out our website, footballisamerica.com, catch up on all the shows and interviews right there.

0:00:58 Keil: We really would appreciate it if you check this out. We've had a lot of work put it into it. We're very proud of our product. We really, really need you to get on there, take a look at our links. Get on our GoFundMe if you got some spare cash you can throw at us. Check out our Amazon links. Check out our Audible links. We've got so many great, great things to give to you. Use that Amazon search bar when you're going to be buying on Amazon. It doesn't cost you anything extra, it'll take you right to the Amazon page as if you had searched through Amazon itself because it is Amazon itself. It just helps us out when you come to make your purchase and no extra effort is required on your part.

0:01:39 Ron: Yeah, a reminder that we do all of this for free but, unfortunately, is not free to do, so anything you can do to help us out would be great. Don't forget to also keep commenting, sending us those tweets, those emails, those Facebook comments, or rate us on Reddit. Without your interaction, we can't fix what you think is wrong or keep what is right. Let us know how we are doing, and you can always just get on there and tell Kyle he is a horrible hellspawn and needs to go back to his creator, Lucifer.

0:02:06 Keil: I prefer to think of Mondo Jesus as my creator. But to each his own, we won't know until you hit that comment button. Get on there, give us your thoughts, your opinions, your ideas, we really enjoy hearing them. I might berate you for it, but that doesn't we're not all having fun.

0:03:00 Ron: Hello everybody, and welcome Football is America with Ron and Kyle. I'm Ron.

0:03:05 Keil: I'm Kyle. Today we are going to be doing just a little bit of draft review. We're of the opinion that if you want an in-depth analysis of the draft, you're already getting it from wherever you get your football information. We don't have that kinda time, so we're just gonna touch on it a little quicker.

0:03:23 Ron: Yeah, we wanna thank you for listening. First off, we are not draft experts, like Kyle just said. We're gonna be having a draft review show here in a little bit, coming up, probably in the next few weeks. And then that'll be kind of our June revival, which kinda brings us to our next topic, which is that I'm gonna be gone for three weeks. So, we're gonna be taking the next time off, and we've decided at this point that this is going to be our annual hiatus. We will do a little draft review show. And then from then on, we're gonna take the rest of the month off, and we will be back in June, first week of June. We'll do a little bit of a welcome back show. And then Trevor Woods from SB Nation, he will be joining us to go over and get into every draft pick that is of importance to him and to us and really get onto who was, who had the best draft class, all that kinda stuff. So stick with us and take the summer and have some of your own vacation time. You don't have to rely on us. And if you're relying on us to get you through your day, [chuckle] you have a lot more problem than just downloading our show.

0:04:22 Keil: I'm assuming things are really bad, like for that guy like, "It's been a rough week. I know what's gonna make it all better, Ron and Kyle using their sweet angelic voices to lull me into a full sense of security and comfort." That's a bad answer. That is a sign that things have gone wrong. Actually, I think we should be honest and say the reason we wanna go on hiatus is not just you're going to be gone for three weeks. It's after doing all those interviews and all the editing. I mean, way more for you but even my wife is like, "Damn! This takes up a lot of your time." And then that just meant for Ron, it's like, "This is my entire life now."

0:05:01 Ron: Yeah, I spent about 30 to 40 hours a week working on the show, working on the interviews, editing, preparing for the interviews, getting everything done, getting it out to Nick, getting him to produce it, getting it back, getting it posted. And then in that time, we also started a new website. We have a new media partner. We have all this stuff going, and it was a lot. Plus, I, as many of you know, am a full-time student, so I'm taking 16 credit hours on top of that. It was just a lot to take on. I just need some time to myself. My wife and I were going on a cruise.

0:05:31 Keil: And then, his wife has a parasite inside of her, I mean... You know.

[chuckle]

0:05:35 Ron: That's also a called a baby.

0:05:37 Keil: Yeah. By the way, Ron's wife is pregnant everybody, yay! So, go ahead and send your money.

[chuckle]

0:05:44 Ron: Get on the Amazon link for God's sakes.

0:05:45 Keil: Yeah, do that. And we know what you're wondering. Alright, 30, 40 hours a week, why does this show suck so bad? Alright, valid point.
[laughter] But...

0:05:56 Ron: Yes, that is a valid point.

0:05:56 Keil: But... Actually, I got nothing. I don't know why this show sucks so bad. [chuckle] I assume it's just we... Just go with, we don't want you to be happy.

[chuckle]

0:06:08 Ron: Well, with that said let's Kyle, let's go ahead and get into this, shall we?

0:06:12 Keil: Alright. Everybody we gotta have this a little bit unstructured. The draft is a massive event. There's too much to go over, so it's just gonna be all over the place and you can just deal with it.

0:06:23 Ron: That and I'm also joining you from my inlaws' house. It's a big room. It's full of echo and we didn't wanna make this a big spectacle. We just wanted to give our opinion on some of the things we saw during the draft, some of the things that we didn't see during the draft, and kind of what our take is on everything, whether it be from the people booing Goodell, to everything else. So that is why we're here, but like said we're gonna be doing our more in-depth stuff come June.

0:06:51 Keil: Yep. So, first thing we should talk about, and actually I'm only just now thinking of it, draft was not in New York, it was in Chicago. I thought the venue was very beautiful and all that, blah, blah, whatever. I did not like, however, no green room. I always enjoyed seeing the parents of the kids who are getting drafted looking super-happy, all the moms super-proud of their boys and knowing, "I don't have to work again." I missed that.

0:07:20 Ron: Well, they still had kind of a setting, similar, where the people are sitting at tables and stuff like that, not everybody goes into that green room and I'm okay with that. I did find it a little weird that for the first round, the second round, and I believe the third round the teams were in their little war rooms. And then after that when the fourth round started on Saturday, they had just like a little area roped off with all 32 teams at tables. And I get that that's pretty much how they do it be... How they did it at Radio City Music Hall, but it just seemed real weird to me and also because I mean what's the point? Why do they have to be there if all the draft picks aren't there anyway?

0:08:00 Keil: A little confusing, but I think the idea is, "Look, by the fourth round we need to make this a little uncomfortable for everybody. We gotta speed this along." We...

0:08:09 Ron: Well, they did change the amount of time that you had to take a... You had for picks.

0:08:13 Keil: Oh yeah.

0:08:13 Ron: I mean, they changed from five minutes to I believe four minutes, at least in the seventh round, right?

0:08:18 Keil: Yeah, definitely reducing the time overall and you definitely noticed that quite a bit. Like just watching the first, I think that was the only round that when it was on we were watching that and doing nothing else, but those picks are just coming in one right after another. The only team that really took a long time was the Jets with the number, what was it, six overall? I mean, they were the only ones who were kinda down to the wire and still had their pick in with 30 seconds left. I get it, they were probably trying to trade their pick and didn't get a great enough offer. But, I mean, it was just, "Hey, this picks in. And so is the next one, and so is the next one." Really liked the tempo of the draft.

0:09:00 Ron: Really. And it seemed like, towards the end of the first round, picks were coming in faster and appearing on the screen before they could even come out and announce them. Like it was... They were just coming in so quickly, and it's... I haven't seen that in a draft in a... If I have, it's been a really long time, but I can't even remember a time when it's been like that, not to that extent.

0:09:18 Keil: Well, and I suppose we should also probably talk about the means in which we watched the draft. Now, I have cable. Ron is a horrible communist who doesn't. [chuckle] So, I was watching on NFL Network, looking at Rich Eisen's beautiful bald head and all the knowledge therein giving me the information that I need. Problem was, I was getting about a minute faster of a feed than Ron was, as he was watching online on his Xbox with the ESPN app. Alright, cool, so I get on my Xbox and I start watching with the NFL app, that's behind the ESPN app. So then Ron has me download the ESPN, that doesn't work, so then he downloads the NFL. And I don't know the names of the guys on the NFL app, but it seems like the NFL said, "Hey, if you're watching this you're on your computer or something, you're a nerd, so let's get the nerdiest dudes we know who like football and have them be the ones announcing it." And it was just God awful. It was so bad.

0:10:25 Ron: At one point, I was so frustrated that they were still talking because they were so terrible. I get that you want to appease to a certain type of person or a certain generation or whatever, I get that. But, I mean, come on, these guys were awful and when I... I'm so used to seeing Boomer out there just losing it with his deep voice and his really, really, really, really big bags underneath his eyes and stuff like that. I'm used to that kind of thing. That's what I wanna see and if I can't...

0:10:54 Keil: Yeah, cocaine's a hell of a drug.

[chuckle]

0:10:57 Ron: And when I can't see Rich Eisen and his glorious head out there telling me everything I need to know. And Rich Eisen, he talks so smooth and it's so nice.

0:11:07 Keil: Girl, he treat you so fine.

0:11:10 Ron: And then they give us these two guys, who were... Who could barely speak. I mean, we're better than they were. I mean, essentially Kyle and I could've gotten up there and been like, "Yeah, we know better than these guys." Because I remember them messing up names, they didn't have positions right. I mean these guys, these guys were horrible and I hope the NFL fixes that, but I know they don't listen nor care what we have to say, but...

0:11:28 Keil: And they don't need to. They don't need to, but they could. I did, however, like the part through the NFL app. They got the impression that, "Look, this is a certain type of fan watching. We can be a little more free." They had some wild stuff going on. And I wanna say it was Michael Bennett of Seattle was there, for some reason, in some capacity, and I believe he was talking about Vic Beasley defensive end selected by the Falcons and talking about how he didn't like how the guy was dressed. And the ladies with us were like, "Whoa, what's going on? You know, you're hating on him a little bit." He's like, "No, he looks good. I mean he looks good. I mean, it's just he looks like he's dressed up to go to a ghetto prom." [chuckle] And I enjoyed that immensely. You would never get away with that on the Main Draft, "Oh, this is offensive." No. Online it's like, you don't give a [beep], you probably have said worse things. You know?

0:12:27 Ron: Well, what about the dude that showed up in a dress? Who was that?

0:12:30 Keil: That was Danny Shelton.

0:12:31 Ron: Yeah, that's right.

0:12:32 Keil: It wasn't a dress. I mean it was, but is...

0:12:35 Ron: There was nothing... That was a dress. It was a dress-ity dress dress.

0:12:37 Keil: It was a pick up dress. Okay, it was a dress. He was dressed weird as hell. I get it. You're from some weird Pacific island and you've got some cultural heritage. But here's what Ron and I both said as we watched man dress there, man dress it on up. Like, "If you're gonna wear the traditional man dress, why are you wearing like Italian leather shoes?" It really weird...

0:13:00 Ron: With high socks. With high socks.

0:13:01 Keil: Yeah. Yeah. Like, why not wear sandals and have a bone through your nose and a spear to throw, so that we know that we as [beep] who are better than you.

0:13:10 Ron: Well, we have just stereotyped the [beep] out of that, so let's go ahead and get on with that.

0:13:14 Keil: Yeah, I'm just trying to give you things to edit.

0:13:19 Ron: Let's start, Kyle, with the Cowboys not taking a running back at all, either.

0:13:25 Keil: Definitely an interesting point. Especially with that whole, "Well, we want Adrian Peterson. We don't want to give up a first for him." Hey, it's a deep class. And on top of losing the great running back into Marco Murray, you figure you've got to go somewhere with it. Nothing. Nothing at all.

0:13:46 Ron: Yeah. I mean, it looks like at this point they're gonna be like, "alright, let's take this great offensive line and see what Darren McFadden can do with it." And it's just... It's not gonna turn out good. I would assume that they're gonna be targeting a lot of undrafted free agents and maybe still trying to get a trade for somebody. It's still possible that they could do that. Especially with Adrian Peterson not showing up to voluntary workouts and stuff like that. I can't foresee their running game being very good and that's just something that they need in Dallas to be successful. I mean you saw how much of an impact that had this last year. Without it, there's just no way that they are even half the team that they were last year.

0:14:23 Keil: We talked about this a little bit in our last show. Not just like the running game and all that. But I, like when we're talking about the Steelers and we were talking about their defense like, "Oh hey, the Steelers' defense is gonna be so bad. You're gonna have to put up 40 points a game just to keep up." And you can't do that, you know? Tony Romo looked so good because people were prepping to defend the run giving him a lot more favourable looks, for the passing game. If that's not gonna happen, I mean, it's a bad look for Dallas. Definitely a confusing thing for them to not take a running back because there were some great running backs this year.

0:15:02 Ron: Both Melvin Gordon and Todd Gurley were out there, and they didn't trade up for either one, and I get that it takes a lot to trade up. But at that point, when you realize that you have a position that is needed that much and it's a key position like running back, you just have to make the trade. You gotta pull the trigger. I don't... I get that Greg Hardy's suspended for 10 games and you wanna go after an undersized defensive end and Randy Gregory three rounds later. But at that point Todd Gurley's still on the board, 10th pick comes up, he goes off the board. The next thing I'm doing is making phone calls to get Melvin Gordon. I mean that's it. As a GM, that's what I'm doing.

0:15:40 Keil: There were a lot of other running backs, not just those two. For crying out loud, there were two running backs taken in the first. There were two taken in the second. There were four taken in the third round. There were some quality backs and the Cowboys had nothing to do with any of it. You could make the argument, it was too early for a lot of those guys to be taken in the late second. A little bit ahead of their time, hard to trade down. Fine, but what are you going to get more out of? Randy Gregory, a very undersized pass-rusher, situational guy with a lot of questions about his emotional state and ability and all that. Or do you wanna take a running back, who has been proven? I mean running back I wanted for my Colts, all through the draft, Tevin Coleman, dude managed over a thousand yards with a broken foot. 2,000 yard season with no offensive line or passing game to speak of. He would've been an amazing talent in Dallas and they had no interest. And when you say, "Who are you going to get more out of, Tevin Coleman or some equivalent or Randy Gregory?" It's like, "Come on, man." You know? "It's not too late to trade Tony Romo for Johnny Manziel too by the way, Jerry." I mean keep going with your pal.

0:16:58 Ron: Yeah, it's not gonna be good for Dallas this year. But let's go on to the Bears, they take a wide receiver with their first pick. I was not happy with that at first. I was shooting flares of hatred from the rooftops.

0:17:13 Keil: You were pissed.

0:17:16 Ron: I was not happy. I was really high on Landon Collins at the time. There were so many other needs that could be addressed, with the defense that has been the worst for two years running. I just, I couldn't understand taking a wide receiver. And then some of the breakdown stuff came out, Kyle was one of the people that texted me and said, "Just so you're aware, outside of Alshon Jeffery, the rest of the Bears receivers have 24 combined receptions." And I was like, "Hmm."

0:17:42 Keil: For career.

0:17:43 Ron: For their careers.

0:17:44 Keil: Not just like last year, but like for life. So, it was definitely interesting because initially you were like, "Every year. Every year they do this to me. Every year." The receiver they took, I want to say, Kevin White, correct?

0:17:57 Ron: Yes.

0:17:59 Keil: Yeah, now, he was one of those guys, had just kinda one great season, not a lot before that. So there's some question marks there, but the talent is there. And initially, you were very sceptical of that talent, with good reason, I think.

0:18:13 Ron: Yeah. Yeah.

0:18:13 Keil: And especially when you're looking at number seven, best nose tackle, best defensive tackle, all those guys are still there. It's one of those, "Hey, why don't you get Danny Shelton? That guy'll be a force. Right up the middle, he'll plug those holes. He'll do great." "No, we're gonna skip on that." "alright, well, Landon Collins. You get a great safety. I mean, a little early for him, but why not?" "Nope, get that wide receiver," and it seemed confusing. But when you look at what else is going on there, it does kinda make sense. And you were having a big conversation with Larry, and Larry brought up some good points to the lack of concern for not addressing defense. One thing that definitely helped Ron out, he goes to our main man, Larry Dyer of Chicago Bears Review. Love you, Larry. And Larry did point out, maybe a little over optimistically but still valid. Like look, you've got Vic Fangio in here, and he has taken the San Fran defense from laughing stock to powerhouse. Now, you could say the talent was still there. It's not there in Chicago. But still, there's reason for optimism. I did, however, enjoy you just being so pissed for like an hour. [chuckle] I'm like, "This is gonna be bad."

0:19:25 Ron: No, it wasn't that bad. I was definitely irritated, as I am, as I always am with Chicago's first run picks. And I haven't had to deal with one for a few years, because we traded all of our first round picks to get Jay Cutler. So, I mean, there's that...

0:19:38 Keil: Wait, who was it you traded them for?

0:19:41 Ron: Jay Cutler.

0:19:42 Keil: And he plays what position again?

0:19:46 Ron: I don't want to talk about it.

0:19:48 Keil: And he is how good?

0:19:50 Ron: I'm pretty sure I said I don't wanna talk about it.

0:19:52 Keil: Yeah, that's right.

0:19:53 Ron: Anyway. They did go out and redeem themselves with their second round pick, and they got themselves their nose tackle, like I was really hoping for. They went out and get Goldman, and that was a good grab. Now I think we can kind of start building our defense up. It's gonna be a good time for them. They were rated as like the third or fourth best drafted team with their class, so pretty happy with that. But let's go on to what made me happy and laugh, which was when the Bears didn't take Landon Collins. All I could think of was, "This is awful. How could they do this to me?" Blah blah blah. And then Kyle was like, "Landon Collins is gonna fall all the way to the Colts, and the Colts are gonna take him." And all I could think of is, "Oh man, this is gonna suck so bad. I'm never gonna hear the end of it. This is always what's gonna be the talk for the rest of the year." And the pick comes, and who do the Colts take but Phillip Dorsett, wide receiver out of Miami.

0:20:51 Ron: And if you... I'm not even joking. To all of our listeners listening right now, I'm not even joking when I said, "I'm going to change my pants. Because when they don't take Collins, I'm going to laugh so hard I'll crap them." And then they didn't take Landon Collins. I did not crap my pants, but I did laugh incredibly hard. Because not only had they done this same thing to Kyle that they had done to me, but they took a wide receiver that was just not even as good as the wide receiver that we took.

0:21:17 Keil: Yep. And it was made... Like the sequence of events went essentially like this, Bears make a mistake, I begin to laugh. Colts have a grand opportunity, Colts wastes that opportunity, Patriots pick up opportunity. So, the Colts picked up a wide receiver instead of the best safety in the class, instead of the nose tackle Malcolm Brown out of Texas, who the Patriots were 100% certain the Colts were gonna take. They're like, there's no way you don't, why would you not? The Colts have one of the most stacked wide receiver groups in the league. I'll probably say the most stacked. I think we can say that now. And the worst part is, this guy, Phillip Dorsett, he's a TY Hilton clone. He ran a sub 4340, so he's incredibly fast. He's 5'9, like 180 something, so he's a little guy. So he's TY Hilton 2.0, which is confusing mostly because the Colts have TY Hilton 1.0 on roster, and then I just mailed a whole bunch of [beep] to Boston.

[laughter]

0:22:35 Ron: Well, I'm glad I get to cut that out. Alright.

0:22:39 Keil: You don't gotta cut that out, it's fine.

0:22:41 Ron: Yeah, well, I don't want you making terroristic threats on this show.

0:22:45 Keil: Okay. Alright, for the purposes of law enforcement, I didn't do that at all. So, if there is some jack-wad who does mail [beep] to Boston...

[laughter]

0:22:56 Ron: Stop it! What are you doing?

0:22:58 Keil: I'm just... I'm covering the bases! I didn't do it! So, now if somebody does it, nobody's gonna be like, "Oh well, look at that ass bag Kyle. He did it, then he bragged about it." First off, I'm not smart enough to do it. Second off, if I do have [beep]... It's like...

[laughter]

0:23:13 Ron: You're just making it so much worse.

0:23:16 Keil: I'm not making it worse! I'm fixing it!

0:23:18 Ron: This is...

0:23:20 Keil: You wanna let me fix it? Just... It's fine, okay?

0:23:23 Ron: You just dig your hole to China, like 'cause that's pretty much, at this point, what you're doing.

0:23:27 Keil: That's a brilliant escape plan, though, fool! So, anyway, if I do have [beep] in my possession, I'm sick with it and then dead, and so that doesn't work. And so, everything's fine, we're good to go. I don't have [beep]. I didn't mail it to Boston. And if you do, you're wrong. Unless you take out a certain individual, who we will not name, but his initials are Tom Brady. [laughter] In any case, look, also kinda like the Bears, the Colts did do an alright job later on in the draft, traded down their second with the Buccaneers, pick up a third in the team, swap fourth rounders, get a quarterback from Ford Atlantic in the third, get two Stanford defensive line men, and Stanford does run a three-four. They picked up Henry Anderson, to defensive end, in the third, David Perry, a defensive tackle in the fifth. Both are incredibly highly graded by a lot of people. And it's just one of those, they didn't have maybe the incredible upside of some of the other picks, but the floor is real high. So the Colts did alright aside from the fact that they took a player they already had in the draft. I think he seems like a good kid and whatever and fine. I'm excited for him, but at the same time when you're there and you're like "alright, just don't mess this up. They softball this into you, Ryan Grigson, don't mess this up. All you have to do is do the thing that everybody wants. Don't mess it up."

0:24:56 Keil: And even if you're taking a defensive tackle instead of the safety, you would've been like, "Oh well, you know, it makes sense." Okay, one way or the other. But the defense, the defense, we got the defense. No, when you take the position you're strongest at... Yeah. Now, Ron was talking to me about this earlier and he said, "This is a dumb pick," and I have to agree with him. The only mindset... 'Cause as a fan you start doing the rationalizing and convincing yourself that it isn't the worst pick. That's gonna lead to your home been foreclosed on and you kids dying in the street and whatever, like you gotta do that. So the mental gymnastics I have done, essentially, is that this isn't a pick to beat The Patriots, it's a pick to beat all the other teams and somehow they're going to beat the Patriots anyway? I'm thinking Wizards.

0:25:41 Ron: [chuckle] So, what did you think about Landon Collins falling out of the first round and going to the Giants at the very beginning of the second round?

0:25:49 Keil: It was one of those things where, for the longest while, he was just considered the top safety, and there wasn't exactly a whole lot of reason for it or for other people not being the top safety. And it just seemed to be like one of those, "Oh, this is what all the draft experts have foretold and that's just how it is." And then the day of the draft, things start coming out. Well, there is real concern about his ability to play coverage, and he's essentially just a run stopping safety, and this that and the other. And I guess some of that stuff was always a concern just not being voiced, and that's probably why he didn't get picked up. There were probably some legitimate play concerns and the article his mom wrote about how he's a butt hole and doesn't listen to her and listens to his draft people probably didn't help. I'm sure he wants to go ahead and thank her for the millions of dollars he lost. But he goes to the Giants, that's something.

0:26:45 Ron: Well, he goes to the Giants. They play a in the box safety style of defense. It will be good for him there. He'll develop well there. I think he'll definitely be using his strengths in that division where he's gonna have to stack up against DeMarco Murray. He's gonna have to stack up against the run the Redskins are attempting to put together, and then whatever run game that Dallas is going to try to do as well. It's gonna be a good spot for him there in that scheme, I think. Quick little hit on here before we get into the main story of the draft was no quarterbacks taken until the fourth round. And Huntley, who was considered the third or fourth best quarterback, ended up being taken I think as the fifth or sixth quarterback. And he went to the Packers in the fifth, which is a big time bummer for him 'cause he will never see the field.

0:27:36 Keil: And as soon as he was taken, all of a sudden this avalanche of hatred on him like, "Well, he doesn't make his progressions very well. He takes too many sacks. He throws too many picks." Like, essentially, he's a big athletic talented guy but not very good. Like he's an athlete not a quarterback, if that makes sense. And when your NFL comparison is Josh Freeman, it's bad.

0:28:04 Ron: It just was a really bad year, for quarterbacks in general. There wasn't anybody that was super flashy. Even the first and second round picks of Winston and Mariota, I guess, were far superior to those others. But I mean, we all know what everybody's thoughts are on those two guys too, and we'll get to that here in just a little bit but tough year for QBs. That's for sure.

0:28:24 Keil: It really is and everybody still has this idea that every year there's got to be x amount of talented quarterbacks. There really doesn't have to be. Look back at the 2013 draft class. There's very few decent players, let alone good players. I don't think anybody from there is elite. It just doesn't happen sometimes, and this year just not a year for quarterbacks, and I blame all the butt-huggers who really want that spread style, crazy style college offence to be the standard there. It doesn't work. Your best guys, your Johnny Manziels suck-diddley-uck when they get to the NFL. So let's stop doing things the wrong way, which is your way, start doing it the right way, which is the Ron-Kyle way, and you will cleanse that colon to success.

0:29:09 Ron: And I don't wanna hear all the fans talking about how Russell Wilson has transcended scheme and made it popular. No, Russell Wilson has had Marshawn Lynch and he is the exception at quarterback not the rule. I mean, let's be completely honest here. I mean, you can't take a traditional spread option quarterback, put him in the NFL where he has to line up under the center rather than in the gun all the time, and actually expect him to be able to read a defense and everything. Like most people don't understand what goes into the transition from a spread to a pro-style quarterback. When you're in the gun, you get to see everything. You have a running back beside you, you can read the defense, check out their shifts, everything. When you have to snap the ball from center, you can't see the defense always. You can really only see the first few guys, maybe the second level, which is the linebacker level. You have to read that defense while dropping back just before throwing the football.

0:30:08 Ron: Why do you think Jay Cutler sucks so much? Because he can't do that. A lot of these guys that are smaller, can't do that. A lot of these guys who turn the ball over a whole lot, don't do that well. That is the problem. And so when you take a guy that has never had to be under-sender, snap the ball, drop back, read the defense and get rid of the football in three seconds, it's just not gonna... It's just a recipe for disaster. So you can tell me all you want about how in college it worked so well. Yeah, in college it does work so well. Why? Because half the players that you're playing on that other... On the other side of the football field aren't the best in the country. When you get to the pros, they are. So even the guys that are third string, guess what, they're still the best at third string than anybody else in the country, at any college ever or anybody else in the world. Because if they... If somebody else was better, guess what, they wouldn't be on the football team.

0:30:56 Keil: More often than not, you can take the worst team in the NFL and they will beat the best team in college football. More often than not, that will happen. So, and also in addition to the Russell Wilson thing... Just like Robert Griffin, when you start making that guy play pro-style, the way that is routinely successful and doesn't result in you getting injured, he is terrible. He is bad. He throws a ridiculous amount of picks. And then what ends up happening is in the fourth quarter, they go back to college style and essentially he's a more talented Tim Tebow, in that regard.

0:31:36 Keil: Wow, that is a horrible thing I just said about Russell Wilson.

0:31:39 Ron: But it's the truth. I mean, when all else fails with the run game and with the traditional pro-style game plan, we talked about it all the time last year, they switched to that spread out, let Russell Wilson just go nuts offence. And they have a team that executed it well, better than the Redskins did. So good for them. Now, we got move on here though. Let's talk about La'ale... Is it La'el, La'ale, Lae'el... La'el Collins?

0:32:08 Keil: Lonnie, Lonnie Collins, because you know what? La'el, you go ahead and have your own nick-cage name to be sort of birthright, whatever. We're just calling you Collins from now on. So anyway, Collins, you know the story, ex-girlfriend murdered, taken down to Louisiana to answer questions...

0:32:29 Ron: And she was pregnant too.

0:32:30 Keil: Yeah, pregnant. Kid might have been his, we don't know. The child did not survive. Ron, you got way more on this than I do.

0:32:37 Ron: It's a big mess. Basically, the cops asked him to come down there and kind of clear up some situation. Never charged him. Never claimed he was gonna be charged. They just wanted to question him and ask him what he knew because he could be paramount in helping figure out this case. In fact, it came out to a point where they realized that he couldn't even have been there, so there was no evidence even remotely, even circumstantial supporting that he was there for it. He just went down there to help answer some questions...

0:33:04 Keil: To help, yeah.

0:33:05 Ron: To really just to help, and that has ended up costing him an entire draft. Millions of dollars. He doesn't have draft insurance. He didn't need it. A few days before the draft, he got screwed. It's a complete matter of terrible circumstance and until I hear anything about him being charged, anything about his involvement, anything about him paying somebody to do it, anything about her being crazy and him having... Even the slightest bit of evidence, I'm going to feel this way. He got f'ed. That's what happened.

0:33:33 Keil: He really did. He seems like a decent enough guy. He was more than willing to help the police and he could've said, "Look, you guys, either come at me with a warrant for questioning," which they wouldn't have done because he's not a suspect. Or he could've just been like, "Look, I have nothing to do with this. I about to be drafted. Why don't you just shut the hell up about it for one week and then I'll come help you." He did the right thing and he's being punished for it, and NFL teams don't know what do right now. The NFL feels largely bad about it too. But nobody wants to take a guy if he's gonna, one, resent being picked too late. And you don't want to waste a first or second round pick on a dude who might not be there, it's a bad policy, so he's getting hosed. The NFL needs to do the right thing, announce him as part of the supplemental draft. Just understand there are extenuating circumstances and that since he was not involved, even remotely, in any wrong doing as it seems... Alright, well just supplemental that guy out. He'll be a... At the very lowest, a second round supplemental guy. He'll get his money. I'm sure of that. But it's just... I mean, gosh, it's just tough right now.

0:34:50 Ron: Yeah, a bad situation. The NFL could've allowed him to remove himself from the draft. They denied him the ability to do that, and I thought that was kind of a dick move on the NFL's part as well. They could have let him leave the draft, remove himself and re-enter next year, but they didn't. They wouldn't and... Or even just go into the supplemental draft during the summer and they didn't let him do that either. And so it was kind of bum deal, and I understand the NFL's position. I mean, they don't know what's going on and with all the issues they've had with Aaron Hernandez and Adrian Peterson and Greg Hardy and the Ray Rice thing, I mean, they just... They can't take changes right now, so I understand their position. This sucks and we're really sorry, but we just have to do what we think is best for the league. And that's what they're doing, but unfortunately in this case, I think they did it to the wrong person, at least, initially that is my thought. Like I said, with more evidence or with more information, I might change that opinion. But right now, at face value, that's what it seems like.

0:35:48 Keil: On the plus side, I mean, definitely not a plus side for Collins or anything like that, but teams really did a good job of sorta staying away from character issue players. If you had something negative going on, you aren't getting drafted where you were projected. I mean the guy who got the closest, Shane Ray, was taken I think 23rd overall by Denver. He was projected as a top 10, possible top five pick, like six overall. And obviously, that didn't happen because of some marijuana concerns. And there's a lot of stuff that is just not being tolerated anymore, and I love that, I think that's great. Because telling the kids in college, "Hey, you can't do this. It will cost you money." They don't care. They show up to the draft wearing $100,000 watches 'cause their agents will buy them for them. The guys who you need to get on board with this mentality are the agents. Because when they start going, "Yeah, you're smoking pot, dropping you as a client, good luck with that buddy." All of a sudden the kids will get the point and people act right. So it's a slow going process, I like it though, stop doing the drugs.

0:36:58 Ron: Hey Kyle, let's go through a few of these draft picks, at least we'll get to the first round here. We don't have a whole lotta time, so we can't spend like too much time on it. But let's jump...

0:37:05 Keil: And nobody... Like we're gonna talk about some dude in the fifth round like we have any sort of knowledge about it. Like, "I don't know, he's maybe good but he's maybe terrible." That's how every round after the third is. It's a crap shoot.

0:37:17 Ron: So let's go over at least the first round picks here and kinda see how we thought about them and what the overall opinion versus our opinion was, but we can't spend too terribly much time on this. So let's start with, of course, the number one overall pick, Jameis Winston goes to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers as expected. Florida State 2013 Heisman Trophy winner. Kyle, your thoughts.

0:37:39 Keil: I like the part where was at his home. First off, I like that. Spent time with the family, especially when you hear his reason for being at home was grandma wasn't in good enough health to make the flight and he wants to have grandma in on the moment. Good for you, young man, I like it. The part I really, really, really like is when he put up a photo on Instagram of him eating crab legs.

0:38:02 Ron: [chuckle] Yeah. And a lot of people were kind of up in arms about that and I didn't understand that. They were like, "Well, is he putting crab legs up because he's trying to be funny and make fun of himself, or is he doing it... "

0:38:10 Keil: Yes, he is. Alright, the time to get concerned is if he's showing himself pinning a woman down and taking advantage of her, that's to be worried about. But if we're cool with letting a potential rapist be number one overall, I gives two craps about crab legs.

0:38:25 Ron: [chuckle] alright, so...

0:38:27 Keil: Your thoughts?

0:38:28 Ron: That you summed it up very nicely, so let's go on to number...

0:38:31 Keil: Number two overall, kind of a surprise to some people. Taken by the Tennessee Titans, 2014 Heisman Trophy winning quarterback out of Oregon, Marcus Mariota, little bit of a shake up there.

0:38:42 Ron: It seemed like up until the very last second they were trying to see if they could get what they wanted for him, and they basically go, come out and said, anything less than a top 16 pick was a no-go for them. I think they wanted a little bit more than that. Teams just weren't willing to give it up, and they said, "You know what? Fine. We'll take Mariota. We'll turn him into a franchise quarterback and to hell with all of you." Good luck with that, wasn't [0:39:01] [REDACTED], I think that you're gonna have a really tough time with a lot of the decisions you've been making. It seems at this point that the Titans are just kinda throwing it all away. I get that Mariota was the second best player pretty much, at quarterback I guess. Still...

0:39:16 Keil: Questions abound.

0:39:20 Ron: Yeah, I just... We're gonna get what we were talking about the first week of the season. We're gonna get the Winston versus Mariota thing, I get it.

0:39:28 Keil: It sucks for Zach Mettenberger because despite the fact that he's the sixth round pick, he has this NFL size. He wasn't that bad when you consider the total lack of talent around him. I think he deserves more of a... He's better than Johnny Manziel, at least. So he could go to being very good trade bait, he could be worth a fifth or maybe even a fourth round pick to the right team, so that's a big upswing right there. But yeah, for Marcus Mariota, you wish him all the best and all that. But it just seems very unlikely that he's gonna reach the kinda lofty levels he reached in college. I mean, let's just... I don't see the... Especially with a team as bad as Tennessee.

0:40:12 Ron: So you're trying to tell me that Zach Mettenberger is good enough to go to the Browns.

0:40:16 Keil: Yeah. I mean as depressing as that is, yeah. He's good enough to go to the Browns. [chuckle] Go ahead and tape another name to that big old jersey there.

0:40:26 Ron: Let's go on to number three, Jacksonville Jaguars, they draft Dante Fowler. Good pick there. This is just a filling a position they need. They had some struggle on the outside defending the run, pass rushing, all of that. So this was a good pick. I'm gonna go ahead and skip here to number four to the Oakland Raiders drafting Amari Cooper, wide receiver out of Alabama, 2014 Fred Bil... I can never say this.

0:40:53 Keil: Biletnikoff.

0:40:54 Ron: Biletnikoff award. So Kyle, your thoughts.

0:40:58 Keil: Well, my first thought is, as a Chicago fan, you should be all about pronouncing those crazy Polish names, that's number one. And number two...

0:41:06 Ron: We never have to 'cause we always have sausage in our mouth.

0:41:08 Keil: Sausage, right.

0:41:10 Ron: That's the route I went, yes, okay.

0:41:12 Keil: Okay. Well, I gotta leave that alone and we're all just gonna call me a great human for leaving that alone. [laughter] Good for Oakland. You take a great wide receiver to pair with your young, up and coming quarterback. It's a smart move. It's a smart pick. He wasn't gonna be around much longer. I mean, it's a good play for them. And I don't see any negative with it. The only thing I wanna know is does this buy any additional job security for Reggie McKenzie?

0:41:43 Ron: I would say that it does at this point. For right now, it looks like a great pick. If the Raiders come out and they win more than four games, and it has a lot to do with the Derek Carr to Amari Cooper connection, that will be a big time lift in everybody's opinion of him. And then the Raiders at this point, they've been so bad that they did... They had just a great draft, to be honest. They went after the positions they needed to go after. Going for Cooper in the first round was brilliant because they knew what they had to do to improve what they saw from Derek Carr last year. And with an actual vertical and top in passing game, now they'll actually be able to run the football better. That and the not having Darren McFadden anymore, that helps a lot too.

0:42:27 Keil: Well yeah, but they replaced him with Trent Richardson.

0:42:29 Ron: Well, I think Trent Richardson's more of your rotational guy. I think this is gonna be more of a Latavius Murray.

0:42:35 Keil: Trent Richardson's not a rotational guy, unless the rotation is rotating from offence to defense. [laughter] That's where Trent Richardson specializes. Well, let's just say the really cool thing about Amari Cooper, he's not a gimmick wide receiver. He's not just about speed or outrunning. He's kind of a jack of all trades wide receiver. Pretty fast, pretty good routes. Not like the absolute best at necessarily anything, but he can be a true number one and that is super-rad. And the Raiders really need to nail the draft, because they're still not getting it done via free agency.

0:43:10 Ron: Yes. I just realized we are not going to have enough time to go over all these, so we're gonna go top 10.

0:43:14 Keil: Well, we're... Okay, we could do top 10 and maybe a couple interesting ones. Number 5, 2015 Outland Trophy winner, offensive tackle out of Iowa, Brandon Sheriff or Scherff. We'll just call him "Sheriff" because it's fun. Lot of people not too thrilled with this pick here at five, Ron.

0:43:34 Ron: Yeah, I think that was more or less because he is a tackle, taken high, who was most likely going to convert to guard for the time being. For some reason, the mentality on offensive linesman is, "Well, how could you ever take a tackle that you're gonna convert to guard with the fifth overall pick?" Well, it's because you're gonna convert him to guard so that he can be prepared to play tackle later. And everybody's saying, "Well, he's not a left tackle." Well, you know who else wasn't a left tackle? Ben Grubbs. And you know what he ended up being? One of the best guards in football.

0:44:03 Ron: So, I mean, you can say whatever you want. And I guess, I just don't understand everybody's mentality about offensive and defensive linesmen. "You know, you never take them that high. You just don't take them that high." Well, if that's your biggest position of need, and you know this is the best guy at the position of need that you have, why not just go ahead and take him, if you know he's gonna be gone come your next pick. It doesn't make any sense to take somebody else and then trade... Have to spend a... Sell the farm to go up again to get somebody else that you really wanted before somebody else get him. It doesn't make any sense. Go after the guy you need. They went after the guy they needed. The Redskins have a lot of problems on offensive line. He's going to help solidify those problems, and maybe prevent RG III from obliterating another knee. I mean, that's the point here, right?

0:44:49 Keil: You and I have talked off the air a lot about the line. And when you're a running team, your guards are really, really stupid important because they're the one's creating the lanes. So for a team like the Redskins, that really needs the run game to be successful, they really need to get that up and going again. Yeah. Maybe a guy who will be a tackle in two to three years being a guard right now, not the worst thing.

0:45:17 Ron: New York Jets, number six. They go after Leonard Williams, defensive end out of USC. Lot of people talking about how this wasn't a great pick for them. I'm in complete disagreement. Kyle is on the completely other side of the fence. My reason is that if you're strong...

0:45:32 Keil: Well, no...

0:45:33 Ron: If you're strong upfront, and you know that you have a weak secondary, you build your strength on strength. Now you have three guys up there that are going to terrorize an offensive line, no matter the offensive line. These teams in the AFC East are going after Tom Brady. That is the point of Leonard Williams. It is to go out there and demolish Tom Brady. If you have a rotation of Muhammed Wilkerson and, I believe, is it Sheldon Richardson?

0:46:03 Keil: It is.

0:46:04 Ron: And Leonard Williams. That's a pretty hefty, hefty rotation.

0:46:09 Keil: It is. And that's where a lot of the criticism comes in like, "Why not address a position in need?" But, I mean, I get it. Like you said, "Go ahead. You pile up." These guys are in contract years and all that. The security against injury. There's a lot to like about it. Plus he's a solid pick, as long as he doesn't just Jadeveon Clowney it up in here, it'll be fine.

0:46:32 Ron: Yeah, definitely.

0:46:33 Keil: Now, looking at number seven, we've already talked a little bit about this. Chicago Bears pick up Kevin White, wide receiver out of West Virginia. A lot of people were debating between him and Amari Cooper as the top wide receiver in the draft. That might just be those draft nix trying to get some page views or whatever. Still, probably a very solid pick for the Bears.

0:46:51 Ron: Less I've said about it now, borderline happy. Obviously the Bears are going to need some help and from what you and I have talked about at length, Kyle, is that if the Jay Cutler thing isn't going to work, at least now you've built yourself for some success later on for the next guy coming in there. So, good pick there.

0:47:10 Ron: Number eight, Atlanta Falcons started their draft off the right way by going after Vic Beasley, outside linebacker from Clemson. 2014 ACC Defensive Player of the Year, great linebacker, definitely a position they needed to sum up. I don't know a ton about him. I don't know if you know a ton about him, Kyle, but it was definitely something [0:47:29] needed to do.

0:47:29 Keil: I know he dresses up as though he's going to ghetto proms. [chuckle] Aside from that people were saying, "Look, this guy, he might not be the top linebacker. He might not be the top defensive end. What he is is quite possibly the top pass rusher." So maybe he doesn't have the coverage skills, he might not be a three-down linebacker. That's fine. The Atlanta Falcons have had trouble on pass rush for a long time. This is a huge need being addressed, and it's a great pick up for them.

0:48:01 Ron: Number nine, the New York Giants go after Ereck Flowers, offensive tackle, Miami. This is a great, great pick in my opinion because the Giants have had a few issues with offensive line, and by a few I mean a lot. It seems like forever they've never... They haven't been able to protect Eli Manning. I think, I feel like he's getting mashed quite a bit and had it not been for Victor Cruz going down and Odell Beckham really emerging. I think last year would've been a completely different story with coaches fired and everything. They're going to bring him in. I don't know if he'll play tackle or if he'll play guard to start, but he's going to be a direct contributor right away for that offensive line that has needed an anchor in the middle, which is why I think he'll play guard.

0:48:44 Keil: The people who have the opposite view, a pessimistic view, are kinda saying, "Look, if Brandon Scherff is kinda a reach at five, then to take this guy at nine, that's terrible." They really wanted to get Brandon Scherff or whatever, didn't work out. I think he'll be fine. I think you're right, let's roll on. Number 10, St. Louis Rams make a huge, huge splash taking running back, Todd Gurley, out of Georgia. Definitely a surprise given his ACL tear and the running back talent already there in St. Louis. But I think this is them kind of announcing to the NFL, they are ready to start competing for real in the very tough NFC West.

0:49:28 Ron: Well, they needed a quarter back before they can do that.

0:49:30 Keil: Well, they have Nick Foles, which you and I both agree he's been highly overrated and been kind of exposed. But I think he's more dependable than, at the very least, Sam Bradford, and he at least gives you a competent starter. So he's at least decent, that's something.

0:49:48 Ron: Well, they're also a run for his team. They're gonna be running the ball pretty much out the gate, probably 20, 30 times a game. They're not going to ask Nick Foles to play a crazy hybrid college offence. They're gonna ask him to drop back, release the ball, check down when he needs to, make his first, make his second read, check it down if he has to. Hopefully Gurley's gonna be the guy he's checking down to. But it does cause a little turmoil in St. Louis with Todd Gurley being drafted, Tre Mason and Zac Stacy were both very unhappy and immediately were talking trades, the moment he was drafted.

0:50:20 Keil: So butt-hurt?

0:50:21 Ron: Yes, yes, very much so.

0:50:25 Keil: Cool. Well, let's keep going because a lot of these are just like, "Yep, sure, whatever," such as Trae Waynes, first corner taken out of Michigan State goes to the Vikings, and all I can say about that is, "Yep, he sure did."

0:50:37 Ron: Well, they've had a lot of issues with secondary. You play in a division where Matt Stafford throws the ball a lot. Jay Cutler throws the ball a lot, whether it's good or not. And then, of course, you have Aaron Rodgers to deal with. You gotta have a strong secondary.

0:50:51 Keil: Right.

0:50:52 Ron: It's just something that you have to have.

0:50:54 Keil: If nothing else, you need to take advantage of all those bad Jay Cutler throws and have somebody who can take that and make it a turnover, so fair enough. Cleveland Browns, pick him at 12, were able to pick up Danny Shelton, defensive tackle out of Washington. Came out gave Roger Goodell a great big hug, scooped him up actually lifted him up. Great pick up for Cleveland, shame for him he's got to go to Cleveland.

0:51:18 Ron: Well, the Cleveland Browns had a pretty good draft as well. They went big on both the offensive and defensive lines. I think what they're trying to say is, "If you're going to beat us, you're going to have to beat us with your secondary. You're gonna have to beat us with your passing game," and I don't understand that...

0:51:33 Keil: No, you're just going to have to beat us by the fact that you have anything resembling an offence or anything even slightly resembling a defense, because the problem now for Cleveland is they're all in on Johnny Manziel.

0:51:44 Ron: Yes. Yes, they are.

0:51:44 Keil: They're all in. We have put all the chips, for this year at least. I mean next year is a different story, but it is 100% Johnny Manziel. Because, what, we're gonna expect Josh McCown to go out there and be the guy in Cleveland without Alshon Jeffery and Brandon Marshall. No. It's not happening. So good for them, for taking a great defensive player, they have a lot of other needs, and I don't know.

0:52:09 Ron: Well, let's go ahead and we're just gonna read off here. Andrus Peat, offensive tackle from Stanford goes to the New Orleans Saints. Great tackle there, probably gonna be a convert. If nothing else a right tackle. Miami Dolphins, they take DeVante Parker, wide receiver. They obviously have, need a wide receiver. They did get Brandin Cooks. They do have Greg Jennings, but they need a young guy there as well.

0:52:31 Keil: They made a smart pick because their defense is very well settled through free agency. They are making a run at Tom Brady. Good, good selection. Number 15, San Diego Chargers take Doak Walker, award winner of 2014. Running back Melvin Gordon, out of Wisconsin, traded with San Fran. Melvin Gordon is a great running back. They wanna recreate the sort of success they had when Damon Thompson was there. That's big shoes to fill, but a very good pick for them. They are trying to make a run while Philip Rivers is still able to do so and not being full of babies.

0:53:08 Ron: Well, not just that, but while he's there. The more and more it looks like they're going to LA, the less and less likely it is he's going to play there, so it's kind of next year or never at this point.

0:53:17 Keil: True enough. Number 16, Houston Texans select Kevin Johnson, corner back out of Wake Forest. A lot of the reading I have done on this is indicating that Houston's goal was to finally get somebody who can stop TY Hilton from gashing them for 200+ yards and outing, which is funny because as we already discussed the Colts picked up TY Hilton 2.0, so that's funny to me.

0:53:43 Ron: Well, and also they have, I believe, Johnathan Joseph. He's going to be on his way out next year. He's going to be in a contract year. You've got... You just signed... I can't remember, the name evades me right now. The young guy there, he just signed a big contract, so this is gonna be an eventual replacement for Johnathan Joseph.

0:54:01 Keil: It's a good pick.

0:54:02 Ron: Yeah, definitely a good pick.

0:54:03 Keil: It's a good pick for Houston. They have a really strong pass [0:54:07] ration defensive line. Now they need to improve the secondary, this shows they're making those steps. San Francisco, we all thought they were gonna be going linebacker, instead they went defensive end, selecting Arik Armstead out of Oregon. A lot of people not liking this pick. A lot of people have been poking a lot of holes in Armstead's game. There are a lot of questions about this, so this is really going to be a very, very defining pick for this new regime in San Fran. Because when you take your defensive line coach and promote him to head coach, and the first player drafted is a defensive linesman, that's a signature move right there. So, this is going to be a very critical thing for San Francisco.

0:54:51 Ron: I think this is going to be the determination. His success is going to hold the key as to whether Trent Baalke and Jim Tomsula are returning after this next year.

0:55:02 Keil: Well, I would not be that shocked with the one and done. What I was shocked by, was at 18, the Kansas City Chief selecting corner back Marcus Peters out of Washington. Went all of last year without a passing touchdown to a wide receiver and did not pick up a wide receiver. So, interesting thing, maybe they felt they'd did enough free agency. You can never have enough corners in this league, so probably a good signing, could've been better. I think we just keep rolling. At 19, the Cleveland Browns pick, again due to the Sammy Watkins' trade of last year's draft, and they select Cameron Erving, offensive line or center, from Florida State. He was a center for the Florida State Seminoles. He was very, very, very good. They're going to be projecting him as a guard for the first year, which makes sense. You don't wanna throw a rookie into center if you don't have to. He'll do just fine, I think. It is a very, very scary thing how many good offensive linesmen the Cleveland Browns have. It's good for Johnny Manziel. It's good for the Browns. I like this pick.

0:56:11 Ron: The other thing is that he's a huge guy, like... I think they said he was like 6'5" or something like that. Big, huge dude. And it's hilarious to see how short Johnny Manziel is versus his linesmen are gonna be towering because he has all these big, huge linesmen there. So, it's gonna be tough for them.

0:56:27 Keil: Don't drop that soap there, Johnny.

0:56:30 Ron: [chuckle] Number 20, and this'll be the last one we can really get to today.

0:56:33 Keil: We can do them all, you go [beep] yourself.

0:56:35 Ron: No, we're gonna get to 20 here and then we're gonna have to... We're gonna have to kinda cap it off here. Nelson, I'm gonna say Agholor, isn't that how they say it?

0:56:44 Keil: Agholor.

0:56:45 Ron: Agholor, wide receiver...

0:56:46 Keil: Which sounds like a Dungeons and Dragons' goblin or something like that.

0:56:50 Ron: [chuckle] He's a wide receiver out of USC. Philadelphia Eagles go wide receiver when they realized that all of their hopes and dreams of Marcus Mariota are gone. So, they're going to try and build...

0:57:00 Keil: The fun fact is Chip Kelly stays in the Pack 12.

0:57:05 Ron: Yeah. But I also think he realizes, "Well, since I'm probably gonna have Sam Glass Bradford out there, then I need to give him targets that are quick and can get into their cuts quick and devise a game that's going to get the ball out fast," and so that's what he went. He went after that.

0:57:23 Keil: Sam Bradford is going to be the first player to be wearing Kevlar body armour on under his pads.

0:57:30 Ron: [chuckle] alright. Well hey, that's gonna have to wrap us up. Everybody, thank you for joining us for this quick little draft review. Sorry, we couldn't get to all 32 picks. But like I said, we're gonna be getting into these in depth later, so this was just our quick little reaction to them. For all of you out there who are like, "Hey, you didn't get to my pick." We're gonna get to you. Alright, we've talked about it a little bit...

0:57:45 Keil: That there are no other picks that are that like, "Oh wow! Let's talk about this," aside from the fact that Denver traded, and we briefly touched on that. I mean, there was some good picks and some fun stuff. We'll talk about this again. Hey, let's briefly mention kudos to the Baltimore Ravens for trading up in the second to take tight end, Max Williams, best tight end in the draft, just before the Steelers had a chance. Not only getting your guy, but keeping him from your rivals, that's a win-win and that is funny.

0:58:16 Ron: Yeah, lots of good players that I have on my board of just to talk about. So we're gonna get to a lot of these guys, everybody, and a lot of these trades and a lot of the devious moves that were made. Don't worry, this will be all stuff that we're going to cover in the future. Thank you so much for joining us. To our listeners, we appreciate everything. To our military, we also appreciate you, everything you do. Come home safe. If you're out there, you're listening right now. You're on duty. You're on guard, whatever you're doing. You shouldn't be listening, first of all, to the radio while you're on guard duty. You're doing that wrong. But...

0:58:45 Keil: Well, yeah you should! Don't listen to this boring narc. You do whatever the hell you want, you defender of freedom.

1:00:33 Keil: Yeah. We appreciate everybody joining us. We'll have more later. This is just a particularly tough draft to talk about, because it was one of the most logical drafts in recent memory, and it really does not have that much controversy.

1:00:50 Ron: Yeah, definitely. So, check us back. Of course, like I said, we're gonna be on hiatus, at least three weeks, possibly a little bit longer. We should see our next show up...

1:00:58 Keil: Emphasis on high.

1:01:01 Ron: [chuckle] We're gonna be seeing you all back the first week of June. We appreciate it. Thank you so much for all the support you've given us all year. We have to really... We need a break. We need to take some time for ourselves. We have families and stuff, too. So, we appreciate everything that you have done...

1:01:15 Keil: Shit, I'm not taking a break for myself. I'm about to go beyond mountaintops in Alaska for like three months. [chuckle] I'm about to make money, fool.

1:01:22 Ron: Alright, everybody.

:23 Keil: I'm gonna make money, because none of your butt holes are getting out there on the Amazon, like it's just the webpage. You go to our webpage, search the thing, and then you're on Amazon and then you buy it, and then we get the money. Why is it so difficult? [chuckle] We add one step to the transaction you're already going to do. This is giving us money. We're not asking you to go help out at a homeless shelter. No, you're not doing that. I'm not doing that. I'm not asking you to do that. I will ask you to do one extra click, because you get the same price, it's just you're giving me money. Alright? And because you don't give me money I have to be gone for three months on mountaintops in Southwest Alaska.

1:02:01 Ron: Alright. Well, now that Kyle is done being angry, that is going to wrap us up. Thank you, everybody. Have a goodnight.

1:02:06 Keil: Thank you.
